HAND IN HAND.

When spring was young and life was new, Love was our only friend and guide. Sweet were the bowers he led us through And sweet our going side by side.

Then summer came, a golden flood, And still we followed hand in hand. Love was the music in our blood And love the glory of the land.

Rich autumn fell, and winter drove The fruity ripeness from the a'r. But wrapped in warm, soft robes of love, What recked we if the world was bare?

So round again we come to spring.
Strong for another year's emprise.
The birds are whist to hear us sing.
The sun is dazzled by our eyes.

For hand in hand, where'er we go, Earth under foot and heaven above, Love is the only life we know, And every breath we breathe is love. —Now York Advertiser,

The speaker, from a glauce at his snowy hair and mustache and sorrowful dark eyes, one would suppose to have been a man well along in years, but on looking more closely at the well knit, supple form reclining at ease in the study chair it was discovered to be an old head on young shoulders."

His deep, musical voice was half sad, half tender as he continued to address the young man, who, standing before him, was nervously toying with a book that lay on the table at his right.

Perhaps I'm not quite as surprised as you thought I would be. You have played together as little children, as boy and girl you were companions, and now that you are a man and Maud is a woman your hearts naturally turn to each other, and I will see my dearest wish realized. The friendship that has existed between your father and myself for 16 years will be augmented by the union of our only children. You are a good, manly fellow, Hugh, but a trifle not headed and impulsive. Learn to control yourself, boy; learn to control your-

"You have much of my disposition, and I would save you from the rocks on which my happiness was wrecked—you and my little girl.

"One lovely morning in early summer, when the roses that clambered over our cottage walls were in bloom and nodding their pretty heads at us through the windows, when the birds, newly mated, were singing their joy and the air was heavy with the perfume of flowers and breathed only love and peace.

"While I was hurriedly getting ready to go to the office something occurred to detain me. I was annoyed and spoke sharply to Nora. She answered me in an insolent, taunting manner that always enraged me. Our words grew hotter and hotter and more extravagant. In my anger I applied a shameful epithet

" 'Coward!' she almost shricked as she sprang toward me, her face distorted with rage and defiance. "What devil possessed me I do not know, but quick as a flash I raised my hand and struck her in the face with all the force I could summon.

"She was such a slender little woman that she had not the strength to withstand my powerful blow. With a low. heartrending cry she sank to the floor. Almost before she fell my senses returned. I realized what I had done, and falling on my knees beside her took her in my arms, kissed the poor bleeding lips I had so brutally lacerated, and with my tears dropping on her face implored her forgiveness. She seemed completely broken. Her anger was all gone, and there was a startled, grieved look in her eyes that cut me to the heart.

'She lay motionless in my arms while I begged her to forgive me. Then she said softly:

"'It doesn't matter, dear. It was my fault as much as yours. We will never let it happen again. Now go to workyou are late already.'

"She said it so strangely, with such a queer look in her eyes, that I would not consent to leave her. But she insisted, and when she bade me goodby she said, taking my face between her hands and drawing it toward her: 'I love you with all my heart, my darling husband, I will love you for ever and ever. Now goodby.

What a long, long day that was! It seemed as if my work never would be finished. My heart was so full of love

"I bought a bunch of Jack roses on my way home to remind her of our courtship, when they were the flowers I always brought her. I did not enter the house by the front door, as usual, because I wanted to slip up behind her where she was at work getting cinnand surprise her with the flowers and
